The object of this directory, the twenty-second annual publication in the series,¹ is to present in convenient form the addresses of officials and organizations from whom information may be obtained concerning game conditions and the laws for the protection of wild life. It shows also the date of establishment of each State department concerned with the protection of birds, game, and other wild animals, the changes which have occurred in the organization of such departments, the publications issued by each, and the personnel.

Since the 1920 directory was issued changes in game officials have been made in Arkansas, Connecticut, Georgia, Illinois, Kentucky, Michigan, Missouri, New Jersey, New Mexico, New York, North Dakota, Oregon, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Vermont, Washington, and West Virginia, and in British Columbia and Ontario. Legislative changes affecting the administration of game laws occurred in Connecticut, Michigan, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, New York, Oregon, Washington, West Virginia, and Wyoming.

Commissions were reorganized in Connecticut, Montana, and Oregon, and also in Wyoming, where the jurisdiction of the commission was extended to include fish. New Mexico and West Virginia authorized the appointment of nonsalaried commissions of three members each, replacing the offices of State game wardens, and authorized the appointment of wardens to administer the laws under the direction of the respective commissions. In Michigan a conservation commission of seven nonsalaried members was authorized in lieu of the Public Domain Commission, which formerly had charge of the administration of the laws relating to fish, game, and forests; the new commission also takes jurisdiction of all matters formerly under the State Board of Fish Commissioners, the Geological Survey, and the Michigan State Park Commission. Washington abolished the office of State fish commissioner and State game warden and created a department of fisheries and game under a single director, with the administration of the fish and game laws under the direct supervision of a supervisor of game and game fish. In Nevada the office of State fish and game warden, in existence since 1917, was abolished, and county commissioners were charged with the enforcement of the game laws in their respective counties. In New York efforts to abolish the warden service and place the administration of the fish and game laws in the hands of the mounted police were defeated by the activity of sportsmen and conservationists, although the number of inspectors was reduced from 12 to not more than 10 and the number of protectors from 131 to not more than 90; two additional troops of 58 men each were added to the State police force, and the powers and duties of game protectors were conferred upon the State police.

In California efforts to abolish the fish and game commission and transfer jurisdiction over the administration of the fish and game laws to the Department of Agriculture met with failure. Renewed efforts to create fish and game departments in Florida and North Carolina were unsuccessful.

In 44 States and in Alaska the enforcement of game laws is intrusted to game commissioners, wardens, or other State officers; in Florida, Mississippi, and Nevada, to county wardens; in North Carolina to the State Audubon Society and county wardens; and in the District of Columbia to the Metropolitan Police. Several national organizations are interested in the protection of birds and game, of which two are international. In addition, State associations and many local organizations cooperate in the work of protecting game in 40 States and Alaska. Twenty-seven States and the District of Columbia have Audubon societies organized especially for the study and protection of nongame birds.

The Bureau of Biological Survey requests prompt notification of any errors or changes in addresses appearing herein, in order that necessary corrections may be made for future editions.
